The Nze na Ozo society – the association of Ozo titled men – is the highest and most important institution in Igbo communities in south-eastern Nigeria. In many parts of Igboland, the Ozo title is the highest title of honour. The Ozo title is conferred on people of good character; those of questionable character are not initiated into the society. Before any man is admitted into the Nze na Ozo society, enquiries are made concerning his character to ascertain the type of life he lives

All prospective members of NZE NA OZO are required to complete this registration form with non-refundable $100.

The Ozo title is a symbol of justice and Ozo titled men in the days of yore were the custodians and regulators of the custom and laws of the land. They were deemed “holy” and were expected to live a life that showed that they were of high moral standard.
